Dear Cordy:

Enclosed is the article from Virginia's journal, Population Environment that I mentioned to you. It is written by Kevin McDonald, who has now been appointed to succeed Virginia as editor of the journal.

This article is fairly long, but is very much worth the time to read it. I'm sure it will give you a new understanding of the Jewish outlook on life, which explains a large part of the Jewish opposition to immigration reform.

What we need now are studies of the other major interest groups – the Catholic Church, the Protestant churches, and labor unions, etc. Vernon Briggs is at work now on one on labor unions, which I think should be quite helpful.

Only when we adequately understand these opposition groups will we be in a position to counter them.

We had a fine time in Florida, and thank you for including us in the festivities.

Cordially,

John H. Tanton, M.D.
